

The Monkey and the Umbrella

by

Terry Bell

One day Lek and Yai were going for a walk. It was a hot day so they took an umbrella. They were walking along the river bank. They were very happy.

Suddenly a monkey came down from a tree and stole the umbrella. The monkey was smiling but Lek and Yai were angry.

Naughty monkey!

The naughty monkey climbed up the tree. He was sitting on a branch at the top of the tree.

Then he wanted to open the umbrella.

He jumped off the tree. The umbrella opened like a parachute.

But the parachute was not strong. It turned inside-out. The monkey wasn't so happy now. He fell down towards the ground.

What's going to happen to the monkey?

Oh dear! The unhappy monkey fell into the river.

SPLASH!

Lek and Yai were so happy. They laughed and laughed and laughed.

‘Serves you right, you naughty monkey!’ they said.
